

ABSTRACT

The described embodiments relate to features in substrates and methods of forming same. One exemplary embodiment includes a substrate for supporting overlying layers. The embodiment also includes at least one feature formed in the substrate, the feature being formed with at least a first substrate removal process and a second different substrate removal process.